WHO: Strides for Peace, CPD Area 4 Community Engagement and Support (Deputy Chief Cato and Sgt Jermaine Harris), Chicago Public Library, BUILD, The BASE, HotRod, IDPH, Marianos, Paving the Way, Purpose Over Pain, Taste for the Homeless, Institute of Nonviolence.

WHY: The community pop-up brings resources and love to a block in Chicago that has struggled with opioid abuse, violence, health disparities and a lack of positive alternatives, health care and social support.

The initial idea to have a community pop-up on Madison Street was the brainchild of Pamela Bosley, founder of Purpose Over Pain and Violence Prevention Director at St. Sabina, who grew up in the area and wanted to show the community some love last summer when gun violence was escalating in the area.

While a street festival was not possible at the time due to the pandemic, Strides for Peace Executive Director Mary Stonor Saunders loved the idea, especially as she had Covid-19 Care Kits (sourced and donated by the Craig Leva/Leva Foundation who used his chocolate manufacturing facilities, Long Grove and Arway Confections, to produce the kits) to distribute to communities where the need is the greatest. Months later, when Stonor Saunders connected to Deputy Chief Cato at a community holiday event, she shared the idea with Cato who offered to have his ACES Team (Sgt Jermaine Harris) help with logistics to bring the idea to life.
Inviting members of the Strides for Peace and local community to join, the Pop-Up has grown to include community organizations and friends in West Garfield Park and beyond, a testament to the belief that we are stronger together, and we all have a stake in a building a city where all can thrive.

About Strides for Peace: Founded in 2014, Strides for Peace envisions a Chicago where all can live and thrive, free from the fear of gun violence and whose mission is to increase the collective impact of organizations working to end gun violence in Chicago. In addition to programs to support community organizations and provide a platform to bring people together who want to be part of building peace, Strides for Peace produces the annual Race Against Gun Violence that raises funds and awareness for more than 50 nonprofits throughout Chicago.
